THE Second Branch of Council last evening passed the ordinance giving the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company the unembarrassed right of way up John street to connect their two depots. The city in this ordinance assumes the responbility for damage to owners of property along that street, allows the trains to run at the rate of six miles an hour, and The Dreadful Famine in Persiapermits the grade of Fourth street to lowered three feet. The city's responsibility in the matter of damages is probably not very heavy, as it is pretty clear she has a right to use the streets as she may choose without responsibility to the property holders. It is said the Courts have so decided in similar cases. The say the famine in Persia is causing dread do so, there will be little delay, we understand, in connecting the two depots.
